West Virginia Central and Pittsburg, there has been constructed a line extending from Cherry Run to Cumberland and connecting the two roads. This extension was opened for operation a few weeks ago. Simultaneously with the acquisitions in the East the dould mangers forced their way against strong opposition into Pittsburg, securing the Wheeling and Lake Erie and building at great expense the Wabash Pittsburg Terminal line from a point above Wheeling into Pittsburg.

The only objection in construction from the Western Maryland at Cumberland to Wheeling is that it makes a somewhat roundabout route between Pittsburg and Baltimore, involving the running of trains from Pittsburg west to Wheeling and then sending them on east and vice versa. Neverless, engineers have decided, it is superior to a direct Pittsburg connection because it is cheaper of construction and gives the system a very direct route from Baltimore to Chicago and the Great Lakes.
